Why use PsycINFO to build a peace psychology course?

Since the 1970s, peace psychology citations have increased in proportion to the growing number of records added to the PsycINFO database. (Blumberg, Hare, & Costin, 2007)

Citations to “peace” in PsycINFO*

* The word “peace” appears in the title and/or abstract

The increase in citations to peace is not accounted for by Peace and Conflict: Journal of Peace Psychology (PAC), which was launched in 1995. Citations to “peace” in PAC were much fewer in number when compared to all journals in PsycINFO.

Citations to “peace” in PsycINFO

Citations to “peace” in Political Psychology

Citations to “peace” as key word* in Political Psychology

*Key word includes reference section or articles.

Citations to “peace” as a key word in high impact social psychology journals*

*Highest impact social psychology journals:
JPSP, PSPB, JESP, BASP, & JSI.
